Annual Fall Calving Female Sale

The market at VLM has been on a remarkable upward trajectory, hitting new highs nearly every week. Over the past four weeks, we've seen a significant surge in cattle numbers at our Wednesday markets, with robust demand from a diverse group of buyers nationwide. Despite the futures market peaking and then retreating, the cash market for both fat and feeder cattle has remained relentlessly strong, clearly driven by cash dynamics.

Cattle supply appears to be at a historic low, leaving most stocker and feedlot operators short on inventory. Buyers are fiercely competing to secure cattle, a trend evident in both the fat and feeder cattle markets. In our last report, we speculated that the market might have reached its peak with record-breaking highs, but we stand corrected. Lightweight and middleweight cattle have shattered previous records, climbing an additional $10 to $25/cwt, depending on weight and class. Feeder-weight cattle have also set new highs, though with more modest gains, ranging from steady to slightly up, with select groups jumping a full $5/cwt based on quality and condition.

Butcher cows, however, are not following the same upward trend. After peaking a few weeks ago, prices have stabilized, with high-yielding cows and bulls holding steady and medium- to low-yielding ones slipping $5 to $10/cwt due to a recent supply increase.

Looking ahead, we expect the market to remain strong across all classes. However, as summer approaches, buyers typically ease off, which may temper the extreme highs, particularly for middle and heavier weights. Lightweight cattle with good condition and quality should continue to see aggressive bidding, while middle and heavier weights may experience softer demand. Cows and bulls are likely to maintain their current price range.

Don't miss our annual Fall Bred Female Sale on Saturday, June 21—a prime opportunity to buy or sell high-quality bred females. As always, if you have questions about the market or logistics, feel free to call anytime. We look forward to seeing you ringside!

See you at Ringside. Randy
